Correspondence.

ST. PAUL, MINN. SEPT. 2, 1885.

To The Citizen:

The thought occurred to me that at least a few of your readers would be interested to hear something in reference to this far off Western city.

Bringing the reader from Chicago, by way of any of the numerous routes, he continually meets with inspiring sights and scenes of grandeur, rapidly growing towns and active cities, entering St. Paul through a perfect network of tracks, into the magnificent Union Depot. St. Paul, the capital city of Minnesota, is the great financial and commercial stronghold of the North West. The location is one of grandeur and unsurpassing beauty, being perched upon a high bluff on both sides of the Mississippi River, St. Paul proper being on the east bank, with West St. Paul upon the opposite side, connected already with one large bridge, and another nearly completed.

This is also at the head of navigable water, and in direct and frequent communication with all Mississippi River points as far south as New Orleans, by several lines of steamers.

Directly back of the city is a semi-circular plateau, elevated nearly fifty feet, but of gradual, easy ascent, affording a magnificent view, taking in as it does the winding river and surrounding high bluffs, with the entire city below. The Signal Service lookout is also located here. This elevated plateau is called St. Anthony's Hill, with its wide, well shaded avenues, and extraordinary display of architectural and landscape beauty.

Its streets are nearly all laid in cedar blocks of wood, level as flooring, and always kept nearly as clean, making excellent drives, which are fully appreciated, judging from the daily pleasure-driving one sees. The business portion is built up of fine large buildings of stone, granite and brick, giving the visitor his first and rightful impressions of a very substantial city, and really representing one much older.

Residences are exceptionally fine, especially that new portion, called St. Anthony's Hill, where I am credibly informed about six millions have been devoted to building during the past five years, and the good work goes rapidly on in true Western style.

Notable among public buildings is the State House, beautifully situated in the centre of the city, occupying a full block. It is a very imposing structure, built of brick and granite, with a tower of over 200 feet, from which an extraordinary view for miles can be had. Hotel Ryan, lately finished, is one of the finest buildings in the North West, costing upwards of a million, having complete accomodations for 1,000 guests, and thoroughly first class in all its appointments. Many others, space permitting, could be described, among which is the new and handsome structure, the Chamber of Commerce, National German American Bank, Merchants National Bank, and the New Court House, under construction.

The U. S. census of 1880 gives a population of less than 42,000, and one just taken places it at 111,000. Think, for a moment—all this increase in just five years! What marvelous strides and still it marches onward, clearly showing the Western energy, determination and resolution to push on and upward to the hills previously spoken of.

The railroad managers being usually farsighted men, long since saw the probable future of this city as a commercial centre for this entire North West country, and acting accordingly have located headquarters here. Most of them also have their car and repair-shops upon the near outskirts, where residences are being rapidly put up, demonstrating their faith in the permanency and rapid development yet to come in this city. The entire railroad system radiates from this point, there being already ten separate roads and others building, and still many others in contemplation. Upon consulting the officials, I find there are at least 200 trains daily arriving and departing from the Union Depot, clearly showing the enormity of travel and rapid progress made. Of churches there are nearly 100—representing every known denomination, affording none an excuse for non-attendence, and from the orderly character of the people surely indicating their beneficial influence.

St. Paul has a paid fire department, splendidly equipped, with all the latest improved steam engines and trucks, under the management of one of Chicago's experienced chiefs. Everyone speaks in complimentary terms of its efficiency.

The newspapers are "The Daily Globe," "Daily Pioneer Press" and "Evening Dispatch." Each is an important factor in the rapid growth and development of this and surrounding country, zealously guarding its business interests, resources, and never overlooking anything appertaining to its general good. Though differing politically, they join issue on the steady progress of their beautiful city.

Minnesota abounds in beautiful lakes, notable among which is Lake Minnetonka, being 25 miles distant, with fine large hotels, whose registers bear the names of guests from all parts. There are several steamers, and an innumerable number of smaller crafts supplying the wants of daily excursionists, while Bear Lake, another splendid sheet of water, ten miles north of St. Paul, on the St. Paul and Dulnth R. R. is a favored resort, being so accessible. There is in the centre of the lake an island of about fifty acres, beautifully shaded and covered with handsome residences built within three years. The place has been transformed as if by magic, from a perfect wilderness. The entire shore of over 50 miles has high banks, making excellent building sites. There are several hotels and many cottages along its banks, each with its bath and boat houses, and last but not least, its fishing, where pickerel are daily caught weighing two to five pounds and occasionally over twenty pounds. As this may seem somewhat like a "fish story," I will vouch for only that mine eyes have seen, and that is an eighteen pound fellow. Here is where I have spent one of the most delightful summers of my life.

LEWIS H. BENEDICT.

The Hardening Process.

Men can get hardened to anything. I used to look upon a corpse with awful solemnity, but during the war the sight became so common that I could almost step upon the dead so avoid a ditch or a mud hole. I have seen soldiers who were kind and humane at home rifle the pockets of the dead upon the battle-fields and chuckle over their findings. Just so it is with the rich. They get utterly hardened to poverty and pass on. They will weep over pathetic acting in the theatre, but laugh at scenes as sad upon the streets. They will shed tears of sympathy for little Nell, but carelessly pass the beggar children on the highway.

Money is an anæsthetic to the soul. It makes a man insensible to the pain or the grief of his fellow-men. I would be afraid to have much money. Peter Cooper and Peabody could be trusted, but they are dead. When will the world wake up to the rights of the poor and unfortunate? Well, after all there is one relief; one comfort and I am glad of it. The poor can suffer and then—die. The rich can feast and frolic and then—die too! What next?—Bill Arp.

Durability of Wood.

In some tests made with small squares of various woods buried one inch in the ground, the following results, says The Garden, were noted: Birch and aspen decayed in three years: willow and horse-chestnut, in four years; maple and red beach, in five years; elm, ash, hornbeam and Lombardy poplar in seven years; oak, Scotch fir, Weymouth pine and silver fir decayed to a depth of half an inch in seven years; larch, juniper and arbor vitæ were uninjured at the expiration of the seven years.

"Did not the sight of the boundless blue sea, bearing on its bosom the white-winged fleets of commerce, fill you with emotion?" "Yes," replied the traveler, "for a while it did, but after a while it didn't fill me with anything. It sorter emptied me."

They Were All Out.

Here is a cricket story. It is new to me, and I hope it will be so to my readers: The newly appointed parson of a very hilly Kentish village being a cricket enthusiast, was resolved to instil a love for the game into his parishioners. Accordingly, a meeting was held, subscriptions and help were promised, and the sole difficulty that remained to be overcome was the discovery of a suitable field. The only level bit in the parish belonged to the butcher, who was a cantankerous, bumptious fellow. He, however, consented to lend his field, and although he was known to be no cricketer he was asked to play in the opening match. His first ball clean bowled him; but, instead of walking away from the wicket, he remained, with the evident determination of continuing his innings. The umpire, therefore, walked up to him and said, "You're out, Mr. Bull, you're out." The butcher turned round and said: "Oh, I'm hout, ham I! I'm hout! Well, hout you all go from my blooming field!"—London Truth.

"Many a man," says a learned clergyman, "is blamed for doing and saying hateful things of his neighbors, when really it is not the man that's at fault, it is the dyspepsia that is within him." A most rational statement.

Never confide your secrets to paper; it is like throwing a stone in the air, and if you know who throws the stone, you do not know where it may fall.

Keep clear of all personalities in general conversation. Talk of things, objects, and thoughts. The smallest minds occupy themselves with personalities.

People don't believe in mixing religion with politics, because they haven't got the religion to mix.

After all, the joy of success does not equal that which attends the patient working.

When you speak of God and His attributes, let it be seriously, in reverence and honor.

THE BOON COMPANIONS
A GREAT HIT!
All of our customers who were fortunate in procuring a copy of our last Souvenir, "Her First Love," will be pleased to learn that we have commenced the distribution of the companion picture to that great card, entitled "The Boon Companions." These cards are nothing if not taken together; side by side they constitute the most admirable pair of pictures ever seen on a shelf. We shall continue the distributon until notice is given to the contrary.

BAKING POWDER!
ASTONISHING RESULTS.
In offering our Baking Powder to the public we knew that we were placing upon the market an article which would bear the full force of our hearty recommendation, and as we have always endeavored to deal squarely with the people, we felt perfectly justified in asking their kind consideration in behalf of our new venture, and we, of course, expected to realize a considerable sale for our "Baking Powder," but we have been thoroughly astonished at the immense reception given to it by the people at large, having sold more Baking Powder in the last two weeks than we expected to dispose of in six months. Everybody speaks in the highest terms of its goodness and purity, which leads us to hope that the sales will be still greatly increased. Remember, we give checks with the Baking Powder the same as with Tea and Coffee. Don't go another week without trying it, if you have not already done so.

Elgin Creamery Butter
The best the market affords and it costs you but 22c per pound. We do not ask you to take our word concerning the merits of our Butter. We prefer that you go to some other store, buy a pound of their 22c Butter and compare it with that sold by us. We feel that this mothod is the most forcible which can be adopted.

By its peculiar construction it is balanced in all positions, requiring no fastenings to keep it in place. The foot-rest can be quickly and easily adjusted to suit the tallest or shortest persons. The seat is made of strong canvas, fitting perfectly the entire length, without drawing the clothing tightly around the body, thus making it much cooler than a hammock.
